Summary

I'm a software engineer with 6+ years of experience building web products, with a strong focus on frontend engineering, product quality, and user experience. I enjoy working at the intersection of engineering, product, and design, taking problems from ambiguous requirements to production while considering architecture, performance, maintainability, and the details that make software feel polished. My strongest stack is React and TypeScript, but my work often goes beyond UI: I've worked across APIs, data modeling, authentication, CI, performance profiling, design systems, and developer tooling. Some of the problems I particularly enjoy working on are improving slow systems through measurement, designing reusable abstractions, simplifying complex product experiences, and building the engineering foundations that help teams move faster without sacrificing quality. Currently interested in Product Engineering, Frontend Engineering, and Design Engineering roles where strong technical execution and product judgment are equally important.
